Dates : From Dec. 2012 till Jul. 2013
Employer : Khalda Petroleum Company (KPC)
Project : Hydra Gas Development Project
Hydra is a hot, normally pressured gas condensate field located in the Western Desert of Egypt that is being developed by Khalda Petroleum Company (KPC), a joint-venture company between Apache Corporation and EGPC (Egyptian Government Petroleum Company). Genesis has been commissioned to undertake the detailed design of Phases I and II of the Hydra Gas Development Project. Phases I and II involve installing Hydra facilities which accommodate the fluids only in early field life where the pressures are sufficiently high enough to free flow to the host facilities. Fluids will be cooled and separated via a three phase separator. The separated gas and condensate will be comingled and transported to EOL for further processing via the existing Shams to EOL carbon steel pipeline. Water will be further processed and disposed of locally.
